GOVERNOR FLOWER, of New York, the editor of the Charleston News and Courier, and many other people in different parts of the country have already named President Cleveland for his own successor. There is certainly nothing in the Constitution nor laws to prevent such a thing, and as the majority of the voters rule everywhere, except in Rhode Island and Connecticut, they can re-elect Mr. Cleveland just as often as they choose. The matter is in his and their hands, and if he shall want to be re-elected and they shall want to re-elect him, nobody else will have any right to object.

When the negroes were slaves a capital crime among them was of the rareest occurrence, but since they were freed, had suffrage thrust upon them, and had white people taxed to educate them, more than one-third of such crimes are committed by them, though they do not compose one-ninth of the country's population. And yet there are white people who really believe that liberty, and the ballot, and free schools have bettered their condition. But there are also people who believe any thing, and to whom patent facts signify nothing.

MR. O'FERRALL must have bad advisers; otherwise he would not have written his first letter about Mr. Alexander, nor his second one either. Two distinguished Virginians of the olden time gave each other good advice, when one said to the other, "don't open your mouth so often," and the other replied, "and don't you write so many letters." Irritating personal controversies in newspapers are not seemly in aspirants for the high office of Governor of Vir- exerted their utmost efforts he would

FROM WASHINGTON.

[Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 14. In deference to the decision of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, that there is no such officer of the District of Columbia as deputy coroner, Dr. Schaefer, who has been conducting the inquest at Willard's Hall, and adjourned the proceedings until to-morrow at 11 o'clock. The curious point now develops that there is nobody that has been viewed by a legally as that has been viewed by a legally con-stituted coroner's jury. Unless one of stituted coroner's jury. Unless one of the injured victims still lingering should die, it may be necessary to exhame a body. Justice Bingham, in his decision, said that the coroner in holding an inquest, sat as a court and was vested with the power and authority of a judicial officer, and such an official could not delegate his authority to another. A deputy coroner might perform ministerial acts, but even this might be questioned. The Justice in the course of upon the writer of the article in queshis opinion on the Ainsworth case took occasion to lecture the excited clerks who thronged the court room on the necessity of maintaining decorum. He told them a coroner's court was not to be considered as a town meeting. However deplorable the circumstances it was the duty of all good citizens to pay respect to the law. Whatever the findings of the coroner's court might be entirely ceased.

they were not final, and any wrong done could be righted by proper legal means hereafter. He admonished them to let the further proceedings be conducted in a quiet and orderly way by the coroner himself and to repress their feelings. Most serious impediment in that way of speedy disposition of the matter by a coroner's jury rests for settlement partially with Coroner Pattersor. After the accident on Friday Dr. Patterson asked Dr. Schaeffer to act for him at the inquest. Dr. Patto conduct the inquest. His health was poor, he said, and his hearing imterson said he was physically unable perfect. Dr. Patterson is very deaf and portant cases.

At a recent meeting held by the Ladies' Association, as heretofore stated in the GAZETTE, it was agreed that the hours of admission to the grounds should be extended on Wednesdays to 6 p. m. The Board of Visitors from Virginia, which met at Mount Vernon O'Ferrall: on the 21 instant, suggested to the council that it clothe the regent with power to extend the hours on other days as well as Wednesdays. Colonel J.Bell Bigger, one of the Virginia board, has received a letter on the subject from the regent, Mrs. Justine V. R. Townsend, which is as follows:

SOUTHAMPTON, Long Island, N. Y., June 7, 1893. I am still too ill to respond to your kind expressions of good-will and cour-tesy, but I shall make an effort. A severe cold at Mt. Vernon threatened an attack of pneumonia, but I am to-day convalescing.

In reply to the suggestion of the Board of Visitors as to opening Mount Vernon on one or more days in addition to Wednesdays, thus extending the hours of admission, it was resolved by the council that the regent be requested to write a letter to the board courteously informing the gentleman that the matter of hours having been earnestly considered from every point of view council regrets that it cannot open Mt. Vernon to the public for any was continued by the other to longer time than has been already granted, viz., from 11 to 4 every day excepting Wednesday, on which day the hours are from 11 to 6 p. m.

In this manner is order maintained upon the places, care and preservation secured, and surely Mt. Vernon is not less worthy of respect in being protect-ed against wear and tear. There are six or seven days of holiday in which the public can gratify their love of patriotism as well as enjoy an outing in that sacred spot, so that council has thought it wiser to abide by its unanimous and thoughtful decision. Thanking you again for your courte-

Colonel O'Ferrall's Answer. Congressman O'Ferrall, who was in Richmond yesterday, gave to the press his reply to the attack made upon him by Mr. W. R. Alexander, of Winchester, in a newspaper card published last week. Among other things he said: "In my card published the 3d instant I endeavored to uncover a person who, under an assumed name, had been lately villifying me in the newspapers and circulars, and stoning me from am-bush and stabbing me under cover of various noms de plume.

"I did so not because I thought him worthy of notice, nor for fear that his statements would be believed in this Congressional district in which he and I both live, but I noticed his slanders because I knew that many people of the State were not as well aware of the falsity of his statements as the people of the Seventh Congressional district who had heard and disbelieved him so often.

"No one can hold him worthy of notice who recalls the fact that he made his attacks under assumed names and by circulars unsigned, and especially as in my said card of the 3d instant I used following language: If any man charges, intimates, or insinuates my name was ever on any republican ticket with my knowledge, assent, or approbation, directly or indirectly, he utters a base, wilful, wicked and malicious falsehood.'

"Of course any man who would anonymously attack another, and when denounced in such language as I em-ployed rest under such an insult, is not entitled to the notice of any honorable man. I will add that I fully concur in the opinion that under ordinary cir cumstances private letters should not be made public. For my publication of extracts from his so-called 'private' letters he himself is responsible. He compelled me to convict him out of his own mouth.

"He had kept up his attacks for more than six years, and endeavored to pil-lory me, and I wiped out his public statements with extracts from his letters in which he professed great esteem for me, gave me hints as to my canvass, offered his services. my canvass, offered his services. Yes, with full knowledge of the Grant ticket circumstance, for which he assailed me, he thought in 1884 that I was worthy to represent the Seventh district in Congress and believed that I was entitled to the nomination over any man in the district, and was my zealous supporter even over Hon. Very few persons were seen around the Kearnstown station until the train arrived, and then they appeared from every direction. The work was accomplished with military precision, and in a few moments after the lynching the crowd dispersed. The majority of the lynchers were masked.

Sheriff Gore and Commonwealth's town about one hour after the lynching, and summoned a coroner's jury being, and summoned a coroner's jury before Squire Stickley, of Stephens City, who, after viewing the body, rendered the following verdict: "That Wm. The officers of the law took every possible precaution to avert the action of the lynchers, which were entirely spontaneous and the result of the deep-seated abhorrance of crimes of this character. Not a single one of the lynchers were or can be identified by any of the eye witnesses.
